Published research

This section contains all different published research, it needs almost more detailed information as (Article, Book, Chapter, Code, Conference Paper, Presentation, Cover Page, Data, Experiment Findings, Method, Negative Findings, Patent, Thesis,

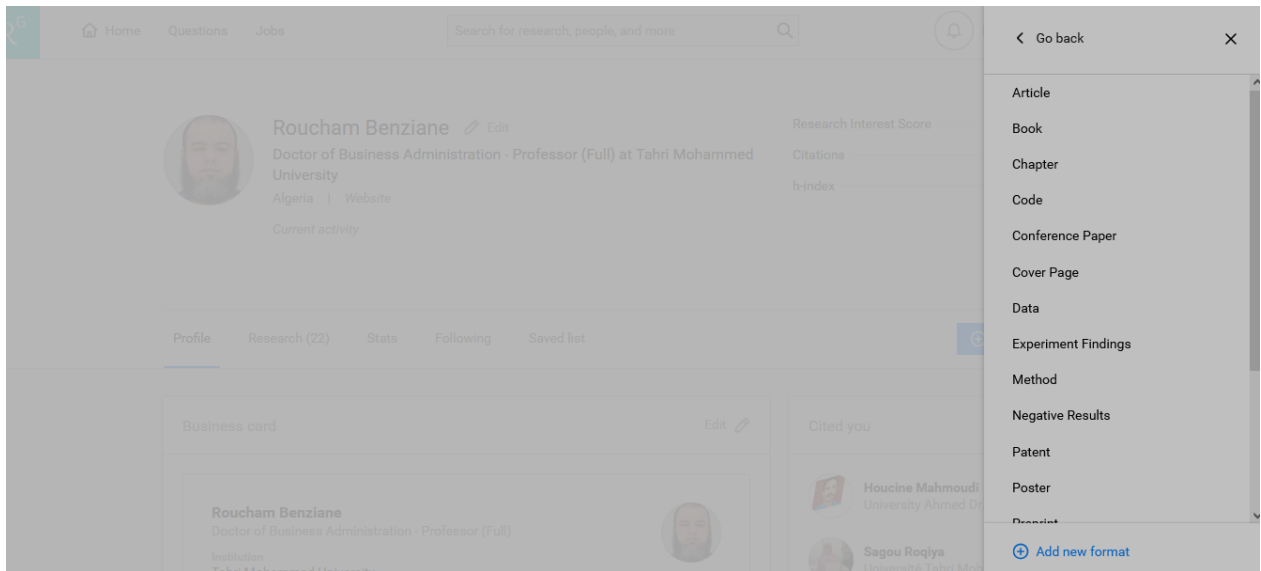

The below types are for unpublished work
Preprint	The preprint is a preliminary version of a scientific manuscript, this option permits you to add your draft before peer review, or in the period between the final acceptance and the publishing, for some publishers it comes up to one year, here the preprint would have saved your time. and would have improved the visibility of your research.
Conference Paper	In academic circles, conference proceedings or conference proceedings are the collections of communications made during a scientific congress and published before or, most often, following this congress. Traditionally published in printed form, Congress proceedings may also be available digitally or directly online.
Presentation	Research Gate Presentation allows you to add any electronic slideshow, or scrolling file displayed on a computer or projected on an external screen. A slide show consists of several slides.
Poster	A poster presentation, at a convention or conference for academic or professional purposes, is the presentation of research information in the form of a paper poster that conference attendees can view.

How do I add my co-authors to my publication?

When creating a publication, you can add your co-authors' names to the publication list. In some cases, you can automatically add your publication to your co-authors' profiles, such as when adding researchers who follow you on ResearchGate, who are already listed as your co-author, or who are members of the same institution as you on ResearchGate. In these cases, your co-author's name will be automatically suggested once you start typing, and if they have a profile picture, it will appear on the publication page.

You can still add co-authors that do not fall into these categories, but your publication will not be automatically be added to their profile and if you hover over their name on the publication page, you'll see the message 'Not yet on ResearchGate or hasn't claimed this research yet'. In order to claim authorship of the publication, your colleague will need to click on their name below the publication title or click on the More button to the right of the title and select Claim authorship - is this your work?
